

Conflict Minerals

Customer and partner information on the Implementation of international guidelines

The extraction of certain raw materials in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) and the neighboring states contributes in part to significant human rights violations and to funding of violent conflicts in this region. In 2010, the United States Congress passed the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Dodd-Frank Act). Section 1502 of the Dodd-Frank Act and the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission's (SEC) implementing rules require companies subject to SEC supervision to report whether the products they produce or have commissioned to produce contain "conflict minerals" that are "necessary to the functionality or production" of those products. The Dodd-Frank Act and the SEC define "conflict minerals" as tantalum, tin, tungsten (as well as the ores from which they are extracted) and gold, regardless of them, where these are procured, processed or sold.

Aquametro Oil & Marine AG (including all affiliated companies) is not subject to SEC supervision, and therefore has no legal obligation to comply with the requirements for conflict minerals of Section 1502 of the Dodd-Frank Act. At the same time, we acknowledge that the SEC's provisions for the Section 1502 to encourage our direct and indirect customers to conduct due diligence reviews within their own worldwide supply chains. We will use them in an appropriate manner in the fulfillment of our obligations of their reporting obligations.

Statement

Aquametro Oil & Marine AG does not purchase any conflict material to date and endeavors to do so as far as possible in its the entire supply chain.

Aquametro Oil & Marine AG will continue to strive in the future not to purchase any material that contain "conflict minerals", financing directly or indirectly armed groups in the DRC or neighboring states or favor them. We strive to know the source and origin in our supply chain and when to influence the situation as much as possible. Due to the large number of products we offer and the high level of complexity of the supply chains involved, it is a challenging and complex and ongoing process. We contact our direct suppliers in order to ensure transparency with regard to the products supplied by them.
